

ROBBIE TEEHAN (ON)Objective/Statement:

Since I first got started in music I've had a deep curiosity for the complexity of this profession and what makes the difference between success and failure. I've come to understand that our biggest competition is not with each other, but inside our minds between what we truly want for ourselves, and what we mistakenly believe we must settle for. Together as a community, we have more power than we realize. We CAN dream of a better future for our industry and our profession. And if we can dream it, we can build it.

Bio:

Robbie (aka Rob) Teehan is a film composer and singer-songwriter who spent six years as assistant to composer Sean Callery in Los Angeles, and worked on many major network TV shows including "Elementary," "Homeland," "Jessica Jones," and "Designated Survivor." Now based in Ottawa, he is known for scoring award-winning independent films and documentaries such as "Scarborough", "Love Letters from Everest," "Frame 394," "Take Light," and "The Babushkas of Chernobyl." Robbie is also a four-time JUNO and eight-time Canadian Folk Music Award nominee for his work as a tuba player, vocalist, and concert music composer. In 2020, Robbie founded The Pro Composer, a thriving facebook community of 1500 and growing, and coaching/consulting business which helps composers achieve greater success and career satisfaction.
